

United Kingdom

Global property watch: the week that was

From a golden visa blacklist to a Brooklyn record, a round-up of world property news

By Kate Youde
October 24, 2018

Brooklyn penthouse makes history

Meanwhile, neighbouring Brooklyn has witnessed the most expensive home sale in its history. The Marmol Radziner-designed penthouse, which was created by merging two penthouses into one, has been sold for more than $20m. Architectural Digest reported that the 7,433sq ft home, in Quay Tower by the East River, includes a private terrace and floor-to-ceiling windows with spectacular city views.

Manhattan views from the $20m Quay Tower penthouse

Photographs: Alamy; Getty Images/iStockphoto; Moso Studio